

Charles J. Stempler

Chuck Stempler is a multi-unit AlphaGraphics franchisee in Seattle Wash. He is an active member of the IFA Franchise Action Network, notably in his efforts to promote the value of franchising in his community and participating as a plaintiff in the IFA lawsuit against the City of Seattle's discriminatory wage law. Chuck has worked to educate members of the Seattle City Council and the public at large about the value of franchise businesses to the city, state and national economies. Before becoming a franchisee in 2001, Chuck held numerous executive positions with leading apparel manufacturing companies. Chuck earned his bachelor's and master's degrees at the University of Pennsylvania. He regularly gives back to his community through participation in several organizations, including serving as Board President of the Holocaust Center for Humanity, Board Chairman of the Humane Society of Seattle/King County, Board member at Seattle Arts and Lectures, Chairman of the Belltown business Association and President of the Portofino Homeowners Association. Chuck and his wife Sally make their home in downtown Seattle with their two companion cats Vincent and Pablo. Chuck's hobby of note is running marathons. Chuck has run 69 to date and has a goal of 100.
